Brackenridge is an organisation about people.

It's for people, for disabled people, by people.

It's an organisation that started 20, 22, 23 years ago when the institutions closed.

When it was felt that a different way of living could better support people to achieve the dreams that they have for their lives.

Rockie Rogers, Family Services

For them to want to come here, it's pretty cool.

Every time we're on our way out here they know that we're on our way out here and they do get really excited. Yeah, they love it.

I'm learning how to cook so that I can do it on my own one day yeah. [Laughs]

So I do enjoy cooking yes. I think it's a good skill to have.

Pip Stewart, CEO Brackenridge

Today we're an organisation that is essentially walking alongside disabled people, people with intellectual disabilities, autism, complex needs to help them imagine their life and then work with them and support them to achieve what it is that they are seeking from their lives.

Rockie Rogers, Family Services

To be able to feel their connection with other people and for them to be someone outside of my family is huge.
